PROPOSED INDUSTRIAL EXPO-SITION.

Two Marriages-Lost Children. pecial Dispatch to THE DAILY CRITIC.

BALTIMORE, June 1 .- A number of our nost influential citizens congregated at the City Hall yesterday for the purpose of organizing "The Industrial Exposition and Musical Festival Association of Baltimore." Mayor Latrobe acted as temporary chairman, and earnest consideration was given to the preliminary outlines of a scheme for an exposition, which as a great scheme for an exposition, which as a great industrial event would attract attention to our beautiful city, and prove its many advantages as a manufacturing metropolis, as a commercial port and also as a charming place of residence.

Yesterday was marked in our societary annals by a remarkably pretty wedding at the Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church. Col. J. Upsher Dennis, a well-known member of the Baltimore bar and son of ex-United States Senator Geo. R. Dennis, was married to Miss Fannie A. Murdock, a favorite of our city society. The ceremate.

Sympathy too has been abundantly expressed for Mrs. Mahon, of Jacobsville, Anne Arundel county, who with her little son, has passed the entire night in weary anxiety at the Southern station house, awaiting the reports of the police who are seeking her two daughters, aged 17 and 15. These young girls are known to have arrived from Philadelphia at 6 o'clock yesterday moraing under orders to wait until met here by their mother. The extreme heat of the morning effected her horse and Mrs. Mahon did not reach the wharf until 10 a.m., when she was informed by the clerk that the girls, despite formed by the clerk that the girls, despite his advice, had set off towards Jacobs ville, although ignorant of the way. Th police have been fruitlessly making every exertion in the search.

Personal Paragraphs.

Yesterany's Balloting.

Special Dispatch to THE DAILY CEITIC. ALBANY, June 1 .- The ballotings yesterday may be summed up as follows For the unexpired Conkling term-Conkling, 35; other republican candidates, 70 Jacobs (dem.) 53; Bradley, (dem.) 1; total, 159. For the unexpired Platt term-Platt, 29; sundry other republican candidates, 76; Kernan, (dem.) 54; total 159. The most striking feature of this record is the meagre showing made by the resigning the meagre showing made by the resigning senators, but this is partly accounted for by the fact that some of the republicans voted for, claim to belong to the stalwart school, and it is possible that in some contingencies the votes cast for them might be given to Conkling and Platt. They have suffered, however, from numerous defections among a class of legislators hitherto ranked as their unflinching friends, and they are their unflinehing friends, and they are learning how much of their former strength was based solely on the belief that they had the power to so discern as to reward friends and to punish enemies. Some of their hearty supporters are threatening to make stunning developments in regard to the agencies by which their fortunes have been brought to so low an abb but the main route. was married to Miss Fannie A. The administration republication of the possible success of an effort they are the democrats. The administration republication of the possible success of the series of of senators, in which effort they are likely to receive the hearty support of the democrats. The administration republicans, on the other hand, have succeeded so well in weakening the stalwart ma-chine that they are making vigorous ef-forts to win a over a few more voters and secure the speedy election of two new senators. One of the greatest difficulties they are obliged to surmont is the con-centration of their forces upon two available candidates at the ballotings yester day.

The drift of sentiment was strongly to wards Chauncy M. More from Cloumel.

DUBLIN, June 1.—The most intense excitement prevailed at Cloumel yesterday, where sales of farms had been announced to take place. At early morning several hundred well mounted and disciplined horsemen, wearing green sashes, preceded by bands and followed by an immense, procession of people paraded the town. All the streets leading to the court house were lined with police and military. All shops and business places were closed. The sales passed off quietly and things went well until towards six o'clock, when a cry was raised that a legal clergyman had been arrested. A shout went forth to rescue the priest. A rush was at once made on the police, but was repelled. The riot act was then read, and the Hussars charged and recharged the mole, who hurled volles after charged the mob, who hurled volley after volley of stones at the military, indicting upon many of them severe injuries. Several policemen and civilians were also seriously injured. The injuries in the cases of one or two of the constabulary will, it is feared prove fatal. The people after-wards gathered in the lower end of the town, were they were addressed by repre-sentatives of the league.

Mr. Conkling and His Friends.

There is a world of difference between what Mr. Conkling considers due to himself from his friends and what he thicks is due from him to them. No man is more exacting than he; none ever drew more exacting than he; none ever drew more largely upon the good offices of his friends. To gain his friendship it has been necessary to adopt all his likes and dislikes; to love his friends and hate his enemies; to be not simply a friend but a parasite. But the whole record of his public agreen may be wastelyd in van for a lic career may be searched in vain for a single instance of self-sacrifice on his part for the benefit of a friend; yes, or for even the surrender of a whim.—New York Tri-
